BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN WILL ADOPT PROGRAM FOR NEW YEAR

City Primary Election Called For Tuesday, February 9th

BENEFICIAL RAINS BRIGHTEN BUSINESS OUTLOOK FOR MILAM

VOTERS PREPARE FOR BIENNIAL BALLOTING

FEW CANDIDATES ANNOUNCE INDICATING ONLY PASSING INTEREST

Cameron voters are getting ready for the biennial election on Tuesday February 9.

While few candidates have announced for office, interest has recurred in the race for marshall, the storm center position in the city government.

In the race for tax assessor and collector two candidates are out with prospects for great interest in the outcome.

So far no candidates have announced for aldermen or for the other city offices. It is thought, however that some of the officials will offer to succeed themselves.

Apparently little interest is being taken in the race for places on the council. This is not unusual, however, because these offices are not attractive and are burdensome to those who hold them.

NEW BANK SHOWS BIG INCREASE IN DEPOSITS

236 DAYS OLD AND HAS $261,421.16 ON DEPOSIT AND NO PUBLIC FUNDS

The Teas State Bank and Trust Company, 236 days old, has on deposit $261, 421.16 according to statement made to the commissioner of banking at Austin.

The statement published in this issue is of interest because of the phenominal growth of the bank since it began business less than a year ago.

The first statement made on May 9, 1925, showed on deposite $103,572.68 and the statement today shows about $158, 000 increase. This growth taken in consideration with the drouth conditions is very laudable and this record has perhaps not been equalled by any bank in five years in the history of the county.

The bank has no public funds and has in cash $142,434.48. H. M. Hefley is president and J. L. Clinton is cashier, both of whom have long been identified with the banking business in Cameron and formerly with the First National Bank.

The growth in deposits as shown by the succeeding statement is as follows:

May 9 1925—$103,572.68, June 3, 1925—$152,342.37, June 30, 1925—$175.211.46, September 28, 1925—$208,693.54, December 31, 1925—$261,421.16.

Mesdames Johnn Denson, J. A. Bell, S. M. Burns Jr., Harvey Dobbins, Gus Evans, W. H. Henley, J. C. Martin, Misses Mabel and Lily Mag Jeter went to Rockdale Monday afternoon to a meeting of the County Baptist Worker's Council.

B. Slocomb has announced his candidacy for the office of City Marshall subject to the city primary on Tuesday February 9.

Mr. Sclocomb has been asked by numerous friends to make the race and has been assured of a wide general support among the citizenship.

During the past two years Mr. Slocomb has been office deputy in the office of Sheriff L. L. Blaylock and has had other and sufficient experience to insure a capable administration of the office of city marshall.

Prior to entering the office of the sheriff Mr. Slocomb was engaged in the cotton business and is widely known here and throughout the county.

Mr. Slocomb in making his announcement pledges his best efforts to the duties of the office and declares that if he is elected he will enforce the law without favors and will superintend traffic and do all necessary duties in connection with the office.

The friends of Mr. Slocomb everywhere will be interested in his race for the office.

FIRST NATIONAL SHOWS INCREASED DEPOSITS

Mr. Cable as cashier of the bank is to be congratulated on this showing.

Business Women Hold Banquet; Hear Address; Plan For the New Year

By Delphia Scott

The first meeting for the year for the Business and Professional Women's Club was held Tuesday evening, January 5th in the basement of the First Methodist Church. Miss Susan Pope, chairman of this month's program, presided over the meeting in her usual capable manner.

First on the program was the singing of the club song by all present, after which a splendid menu was served by circle No. 4 of the Methodist Missionary Society consisting of chicken a la king in patties, saltinas, potato flakes fruit salad on lettuce leaf hot coffee, pineapple whip with whipped cream and white loaf cake. During the feast Professor Geo. Fairleigh, Director of the Cameron Municipal Band, with his orchestra consisting of his daughter, Miss Doris, Miss Allena Maddox and Don Slocomb Jr., rendered a delightful musical program. Miss Kathleen Baggett in her sweet attractive voice gave a choice reading entitled "The Lost Purse", and responded to a hearty encore.

The speaker of the occasion Ex-Mayor of Cameron, and editor of the Cameron Herald, J. B. White, was introduced by the chairman who gave a splendid address on "New Year Resolutions," first giving a history of the rise of women, which was given very close attention by the club. The following is the splendid address given:

" Without a study of history we cannot appreciate the marvelous progress of womankind.

"From the ancient writers we learn much that is a reproach to the race in the subordination of woman to meniel domestic tasks and her rise from oppression is as impressive and inspiring as it was revolutionary.

"Co-extant with the spread of Christianity there began an upheaval of customs that raised the position of women and notwithstanding some divergence of thought as manifested in earlier literature, the transition from savage estimate of womankind set in with the spread of the gospel and through succeeding ages she reached a position of high degree in social and governmental economy.

"In the rise of modern movements for emancipation we find that in the 17th century in France the seeds of the modern growths of women's influence were sworn. At that time women began to assert themselves very prominently and independently

CROP PROSPECTS ARE GOOD IN TERRITORY

BUSINESS MEN SEE PROSPERITY AHEAD FOR 1926 IN THE COUNTY

Beneficial rains ranging in depth of precipitation from two to three inches fell over Milam County Friday and Saturday of last week and have resulted in prospects for a good crop yield.

As a result of the rains farmers are insured a crop and farm work has gone forward on a large scale.

Banks are feeling more hopeful and credits are said to be better than for several months.

Business men and merchants are inclined to liberalize credits and the general impression is that prosperity is not far distant.

The old year was better for business than was anticipated and the holiday trade was heavy, making the merchants feel better about conditions.

MRS. MARTHA HUTCHESON

The death of Mrs. Martha Hutcheson, mother of Mrs. L. J. Mohler, occured at the Mohler residence on Tuesday following an illness of some weeks duration. Accompanied by members of the family, she was carried to the old home in Winchester and buried in the cemetery there on Wednesday. Rev. R. S. Mrs. Hutcheson was probably the oldest resident in Milam County, being in her ninetieth year at the time of her death. In her youth her family moved into different parts of Texas always living on the frontier. She was familiar with border life in the days of the Indians and could recount many hardships that were suffered by Texas pioneers. She had been a faithful member of the Methodist church for many years. She was married to James E. Hutcheson on January 16, 1865, who died December 24, 1893. He was a confederate vetran. She has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. L. J. Mohler for many years and was tenderly cared for in her old age and will be sadly missed in the home.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

They Prayed for Peace

By BERTHA R. McDONALD

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

IT WAS all over.

Swallowed up in one corner of the huge davenport she sat, a pathetic little figure, gazing unseeingly into the grate fire, gripping in her hand the mute evidence which decreed that she need never admit him to her home again. At the same time, every fiber of her being was crying out for him, yearning for him, needing him.

And yet, how could any woman with an atom of pride or self-respect have gone on with things as they were? One could forgive brutality, nonsupport, immorality, any of these things and try to go on, if one loved, but in a case like theirs, where there really was nothing tangible—

The lawyers had named it incompatibility and he had not repudiated the claim.

"But how can I ever live without him?" she moaned aloud, slipping to her knees beside the couch, burying her head among the pillows. "Was I too hasty? Is there some other thing I might have tried? Oh, God," raising her wet eyes prayerfully, "flash the light of Your wisdom upon my pathway and guide me to peace—peace—peace—"

"Go 'way! Wanna Daddy! Never did have 'nough Daddy!"

The childish wail, floating down to her from somewhere above, interrupted her tearful supplication, turning the knife in her heart with a sickening twinge.

His son! His son and hers, who never had had enough daddy! And now, neither of them was even to hear his voice.

The next moment there penetrated through the stillness of the drawing room, unlighted except for the glow from the fire, the sound of a key in the latch, the gentle opening and closing of a door, followed by footsteps coming along the hall. A brand from the fire blazed up and disclosed to the woman upon her knees, the outline of a familiar figure standing in the curtained archway between the hall and the drawing room; a figure bowed as though in mental anguish, unmindful of time or surrounding.

Quietly, on her knees, she slipped along the edge of the davenport, losing herself among the shadows at the end, watching breathlessly, waiting, for what, she could not have told.

Presently the figure moved on toward the grate and stood, apparently absorbed in something pictured to him in the flickering fire. The butler, entering with wood for the fire, seemed to lift him from the apathy into which he had fallen.

"Are—are you stopping for the night, sir?" the surprised butler asked jerkily.

"No—it—it's only another of my usual mistakes. Forget about being barred—still have my key—used it from force of habit—that's all. I—I'll go in a moment."

"It's quite all right, sir," the servant returned with suppressed excitement. "It's a cold night—I've brought wood—you—you'd better get warm, sir."

Thrusting a log upon the glowing coals, the butler brushed his sleeve coat carefully, glancing furtively meanwhile at the preoccupied man who had so recently been deposed as his master and hurried from the room.

For one long moment the man stood there motionless, then dropped to his knees before the couch in the same spot where but a little while before another suppliant had begged for peace.

"Oh, God," he prayed aloud, his head upon the couch, his hands folded above it, "show me the way! Tell me that I have done right to let them go out of my life forever, still loving them as I do! What is the meaning of it all? What is this hard, cruel thing that stalked like a death-dealing scourge through my home and drove my happiness out? Oh, for peace—peace—peace!"

To the stricken woman crouching on the floor among the shadows there suddenly appeared a great light. Creeping to the man's side she laid her tear-wet face against his folded hands and sobbed aloud.

"My dear—my dear!" The smothered gasps reached the man's ear, penetrating his benumbed consciousness like a ray of silvery moonlight. "I did it for you," the woman went on. "I thought we, the boy and I, the home, everything, annoyed you—bored you. I thought you longed for freedom and I—I only wanted you to have what was necessary to make you happy!"

Slowly unfolding his hands he took her face between his palms and drew it forward to his breast.

The last smoldering spark in the fire died out. The glowing tapestry of the morning spread like a promise in the dull gray of the sky. Still the man and woman sat there, facts shifting and changing ground, the real becoming a shadow, the shadow becoming truth, like things in a flowing mist, until the lamp of their mutual love shone through the fog, lighting the future with a blaze of faith and hope.

And then floating down to them from somewhere above, setting the strings of their hearts vibrating to a sublime harmony, there came the poignant cry:

"Never did have 'nough daddy!"

NEFF SCORES MURDER IN BOOK ON "BATTLES OF PEACE"; PENITENTIARY SYSTEM SHOULD BE CENTRALIZED

PAT M. NEFF

Pat M. Neff, who put in four years as governor and a number of others as speaker of the house and a member of the Texas Legislature, has had his battles of peace and politics little less renowned than war. And now he has written a book about it, "The Battles of Peace," just off the press.

On the whole the book is disappointing in that it is burdened with too much extraneous matter, such as the graduating address delivered by young Mr. Neff at Baylor in 1894, such as executive proclamations on every public occasion. It is bad enough, urged by the obligations of friendship, to have to listen to a graduation address. But when one is expected to read one 30 years after its sophmoric delivery—!

Had governor Neff eliminated such chaff as has been mentioned and stuck steadfastly to a recount of his political and executive career, purged of a reprint of too many of his speeches, he would mave made a volume, not only of genuine interest, but of real practical value to the state which he so honorably served. There is much of value in this book as it is.

As a case in point: In a chapter devoted to a call for an adequate education system in Texas the author informs that "Illiteracy, dangerous and destructive, stalks abroad in the state" and advises that there are 300,000 Texans above the age of 10 years who can neither read nor write. Of these Mr. Neff adds this fine line: "They must live like foreigners in the land of their birth," being of, but not a part of their own government.

Now, what of a remedy of this educational inadequacy? Why, spend more money, the arthor urges. Texas ranks far above California in revenue resources, but ingloriously below in educational expenditures, the former governor points out, and suggests to-wit: "Let us get the money where it is and spend it on the children where they are."

Another chapter of the book is devoted to the state highway system. It is a review of what was begun during the Neff administration and concludes: "The day is not far distant when we shall have a comprehensive system of arterial highways, free from railroad crossings, shaded by beautiful trees, adorned with attractive shrubbery, lighted with electricity, and appreciated by the people as a thing of beauty and joy forever." Rather a rosy and Polly Annan picture in the light of recent events in Austin!

The former governor submits constructive outline for improvement of the abominable penintentiary system. First, he would centralize, which is the most important factor he urges for betterment of the system. He would industrialize it to such an extent that it would manufacture the commodities necessary to its own existence. But even after all that is done he views the system with a gloomy eye and concludes that "there will always be room for improvement We will never have a penitentiary system free from mistakes."

By the very striking contrast between governor Neff's pardon policy and that of his successor, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, the chapter of this subject attracts the reader of "The Battles of Peace." Governor Neff was not generous in the matter of pardons, and in view of recent events and daily chronicled escapes at the prison farms and disgruntled convicts one observation by Mr. Neff appears particularly pertinent, viz.:

"Since the granting of the first pardon to a Texas convict—the granting of pardons has always created dissatisfaction in the penitentiary, causing attempted escapes among those not pardoned. Each convict remaining invariably feels that he was more entitled to a pardon than the one who received it.

"The free use of the pardoning power not only creates dissatisfaction among the convicts, but also creates a disrespect for the law everywhere. It robs the law of its deterrent powers. It robs the courthouse of its victory over the lawless element. It increases the insecurity both of life and property. It causes potential criminals to disregard the law. It hold out the flag of hop to every professional lawbreaker. It encourages young men to enter crime as a profession.

Law enforcement with Governor Neff is a positive fetish. He has preached it from every stump in Texas and from many a platform, chatauqua and otherwise, in a number of other states in this Union. Prohibition is the pet of the law enforcement hobby, but it is not the prohibition that he scores heaviest in his book when writing of the majesty of the law. It is on the subject of murder.

"Almost every thing has risen in value in this country (Texas) except human life," he wrote. "We average annually more than three homicides a day in Texas. We have in this state approximately two hundred homicides a year to each million inhabitants. Italy has 95 to the million; Canada has five to the million.

"More people last year were murdered in Texas, with a population of 5,000,000, than were murdered during the past 20 years in the British empire with a population of 50,000,000. This appalling contrast but emphasizes the necessity for an immediate and effective remedy for the present laxity in the enforcement of the law in Texas. We have in this country too many killings and too few convictions."

It is upon such vital subjects as have been referred to that Governor Neff's work scores. His treatment of his campaign for governor, which was unique in political history in Texas that he spoke at every cross roads and combed the state with a fine tooth comb, was all too brief. He could have devoted the major part of the book to it and still sustained interest, the reviewer believes.

"The Battles of Peace" offers, after all, a worth while contribution to the serious minded interested in improvement of their state if it offers but little to enduring literature.

Miss Louise Allen of Denton was the guest of Miss Louise Adams during the holidays. They returned Friday to Edinburg where they are teaching.

W. G. Henderson, painter, box 732, says: "My back ached and getting up was anything but pleasant for the muscles in my back were sore and drawn and every move was painful. It was nothing unusual for me to get up several times during the night to pass the secretions and this showed my kidneys were very much out of order. After using Doan's Pills from the Jackson and Read Pharmacy, I was entirely cured."

DANCING FOR THE OLDER FOLKS

Henry Ford is exerting an interesting influence in the field of popular amusements, not merely by promoting a revival of old time dances, but by the encouragement his influence may give to middle aged and older people, to keep up their dancing habits themselves.

The idea has prevailed somewhat generally, that dancing is a diversion exclusively for the young people. This is somewhat promoted by the tendency of the married women to quit dancing at an early age. Such women frequently find that the young men prefer to dance with the younger girls, so they are apt to quit, and their husbands usually stop with them.

Mr. Ford is one of the many middle aged people who dislikes to give up these active habits. So he has been going to work systematically to study dancing, and is performing a public service in attracting attention to the beauty and fascination of many of the older forms of this art, which lack the decadent customs so frequently seen on dance floors to-day.

If the middle aged and elderly women find they do not obtain invitations from the younger men, they and their husbands and friends can organize parties of their own type. People do not retire from the golf links because they have passed a certain age mark, but they keep on playing as long as they feel like it, perhaps until they are 80 or 90 or more years old. It may be the same with dancing.

Inactivity is one reason why men and women grow old rapidly. Dancing will keep them young.

Also it will be helpful if the youngsters see more of the older people on the dance floor. Perhaps they will learn from their example that they do not have to imitate the manners of Africa in order to demonstrate their own superiority as sports.

THE WOODPILE

In these days of power saws and new ways of heating and cooking, the majority of boys are not getting the fine exercise with the sawhorse and bucksaw that their fathers used to obtain.

About this time, as the old almanac says, it was formerly customary for the old man to gently but firmly steer his son out to the woodpile, and suggest that it was needful for him to reduce those powerful looking sticks of four foot wood to kitchen stove size, before plowing time came in the spring. It was suggested more or less delicately, that these youngsters had free board and clothes and spending money, and the least they could do was to perform the alloted task on that woodpile.

It cannot be said that the boy element took hold of the woodpile with willing zest. However, if the kid over in the next yard had one to reduce also, then the spirit of competition came in. But on many days the old saw would drag terribly. It did seem as if those long sticks were the very invention of the evil one, so gnarled and knotty were they that it seemed as if the saw would never penetrate their twisted and iron like fibers.

However, no kid in those days liked to admit he was stumped or could not do the things generally expected of a boy. The youngster was thrilled also to hear the old fellows brag of the very short time in which they could saw and split a cord of wood. He was incited to speed up a bit himself, and as the days went on, found himself able to do more and more of a stunt.

It was a fine physical exercise and good moral discipline. Boys trained to cut up a woodpile usually made good, they raised industrious families, and had a pretty good time through it all.

THE FAST SETS

The young people of certain fast crowds are aroused a good deal of comment in many cities, going so far as disgust in some cases, because of the course way they often behave at dances and various functions. Many of them become intoxicated. The language and manners of many young men and women when together would be called highly unsuitable by refined persons. Some people see enough of these doings so that they are seriously alarmed about the "degeneracy" of the younger generation.

Yet it is well to remember that while a few of these swift youths are thus letting down their standards, there are many more who are behaving well in quiet homes and in well conducted meeting places, where they are doing earnest study and getting ready for good work in the world.

There always have been fast crowds, so this development is nothing new. Always there have been many who felt no sense of self control or pride of conduct.

Some people watch the doings of these rapid bunches, and think what a wonderful good time they are having, with something going on all the time, and they desire to join in with them. But it is doubtful if they have any more fun than any one else. They have become surfeited with highly spiced pleasures, so that normal occupations do not look good to them.

It is doubtful if the men of these crowds are making progress in a business way. Their manners create prejudice against them in many cases, which operates against their advance in their occupations. The women do not gain better business positions that way, nor secure social regard. These folks seem to get nothing out of their swiftness except a little immediate sense gratification, while in the most important ends which people hold in view they are generally falling behind.

ORGANIZATION STANDARDS

Civic development depends largely on such organizations as churches, fraternal societies, clubs, etc. Different places accomplish quite unequal results thereby.

In some towns people seem to be content with mediocre standards. Churches will not pay their ministers and musicians much, fraternal societies are satisfied with unattractive quarters, clubs are content with unrewarding programs.

A more ambitious community seeks more advantages. It demands a higher range of talent, it is willing to pay more for inspiration, it demands adequate settings for these activities. Running organizations on that basis may not be much more costly in the long run. On that basis they attract more members, they obtain larger incomes, and become able to carry on activities on a more rewarding scale.

YOUNG MEN AWAY FROM HOME

Modern conditions bring into a city or town a large number of young people who work in that place but whose homes are elsewhere. Some of them find it difficult to obtain pleasant homes. The number of these is suggested by figures from one branch of the St. Louis Young Men's Christian Association, where an average of 266 young men have been applying each month for rooms.

It makes a big difference what kind of a rooming or boarding house these fellows find. If they are welcomed only for the money they can pay, they will not be very happy. If they find kind hearted people who will treat them somewhat as if they were their own boys, they are much less likely to get into trouble and are apt to do well in their occupations. The young man away from home is often lonely, and there should be plans for making him happy and socially useful.

WHY NOT PAY STRAIGHT SALARIES?

A relic of days long past still exists in Texas. The fee system, by which many officers obtain their livelihood, is no longer necessary. Years ago when an oifficer had to spend part of his time enforcing the law because of the scanty population, this method of employment was permissable; but now there is enough work in every office for its occupant to stay busy all the time.

By the fee system, an officer will naturally attempt to enforce those laws that will pay him the most. Many times the system will cause him to graft or at least to be too hardened in individual cases.

Each office should pay its occupant a salary commensurate with the duties imposed and the responsibility attached. Many states do this now and Texas always claimed to be at the very front in progressive matters.

When the legislature next meets, there could be no more important subject to discuss than this fee system. Much money could be saved, justice could be had to a greater extent and officers would tend to do their full duty—not to enforce only those laws which bring them the most money.

All officers are not subject to those temptations, yet it is natural for the tendency to be there. Let's do away with the tendency.

TEXAS JUT AS GOOD

A few years ago you could hear nothing of any section of the country except California. Now while the Florida boom is holding sway all over the nation, the name of that state is on everybody's lips.

People are like sheep. Some enterprising individual or community gets a boom started and the entire populance of the country begins to swoop down. Before the boom, the section involved is only like any other land; yet, it soon becomes so valuable that thousands are paid for what dollars bought before.

As far as soil goes, Texas has them all beat. The Rio Grande valley is better than either Florida or California, and the other parts of Texas are pust as productive for certain things as the valley. Some of these days, this state is going to see a boom that will put both California and Florida in the shade. And this future prospect will not be inflated to any great extent, for Texas really has the resources and possibilities.

How soon this prosperity will come, no one knows. But can there be any greater incentive than for us to talk it ourselves?

Tuesday night, "The Saddest Words Ever Uttered by Jesus."

A beautiful Bible will be given to the person who guesses what they are, these words being recorded somewhere in the first ten chapters of John's Gospel.

Wednesday night "A Sermon on a raised Window Shade."

Don't fail to pull your shade down each night.

Excerpts from sermon's follows:

"There are just as many people going to hell-the religious route as any other."

"You can't hold on to the devil with one hand and Jesus Christ with the other."

"You can't live for the devil six days out of the week and live for God on Sunday.'

"There are only two sides to life's hill, only two roads in this world upon which you can travel. One leads to heaven and the other to hell, they run in opposite directions and you can't travel on both of them at the same time."

"Folks act now-a-days as if the undertakers had gone out of business yet the casket is already made in which you may he held."

"The one who least expects to go is usually the one who is first taken."

"The modern dance is the devils official headquarters."

"Two things that are sending more girls to hell than any thing else are, night car riding and the modern dance."

"You are headed for hell not because of what you have done but because of what you haven't done."

"If there were no hell I'd quit preaching. If folks never died I'd quit preaching. If hell only lasted a million years I'd quit preaching because after the million years were up folks could escape but its forever. everlasting, eternal, and after a million years are passed eternity will just be beginning."

"Some folks say there is no hell, that's where they and the Bible don't agree. Some folks say there ought not to be a hell, that's where they and God don't agree. Some folks say a just and loving God could not make hell for human beings. God didn't make hell for you or for me. He made hell for the devils and his angles (see Math. 25:41) and if you insist upon breaking into a place that was not made for you, don't blame God."

"The same Bible that says that the righteous shall go away into eternal joy says that the unrighteous shall go away into eternal punishment Math. 25:46.)

"Fire or no fire, it will be hell just the same. Your mother won't be there. Your little sister won't be there. The little baby that you carried out to the cemetery won't be there, and it will be eternal darkness. And think of the class of people who will be there, how will you like to associate with them, live with them forever and forever.?"

"Some one says that Mr. Russell and Mrs. Eddy say that there will be no hell. Mr. Russell and Mrs. Eddy don't know any more about it than you do, gentle reader. It makes no difference what any philosopher, theologian, dreamer or preacher thinks or says about it, the question is What Does God's Holy Word Say About It. Please don't mail me any of Mr. Russell's books or phamphlets or anybody else's. Write and tell me what God says about it in his Holy Word."

"Noah couldn't have traded his ark for a second hand Ford ten minutes before the flood came. But after the door closed and the floods broke, when the clouds began to burst, the rivers left their banks and the sea bursts its walls there wasn't a man or woman who would not have gladly given all his money, notes, all his bonds, all his lands, and all his treasures for standing room in the old boat. But it was too late."

"The ark of safety today is Christ's church which he established and bought with His own blood, which he loved enough to die for, and to-day is the day to step inside."

"The night the death angel passed over Egypt in those homes where God had been obeyed and the lamb had been killed according to the divine command and the blood painted upon the front door the death angel passed over. But in those homes where the blood had not been painted upon the front door the oldest child was slain."

"You and I are not commanded to kill any lambs to-day, nor paint any blood on the doors of our houses, but the blood of Jesus Christ God's Son, the lamb of God, cleanseth from all sin, and when the death angel passes over and you are summoned to a world beyond the skies it will be an awful hour for you my friend, if the blood of the lamb of God has not been painted upon the panels of your heart.

"Someday you expect to get right with God. Someday you may be too late. Thats why the bridge went down, they knew it needed repairing and expected to fix it, but they put it off until it was too late. Thats why the operation was fatal. The physician had advised an operation long time ago, but they put it off until it was too late."

"Many a man will go through fire to be with his wife in this world, but will not walk ten steps in order to be with her in the world beyond the skies. There shall be a sad separation. Two shall be in the field, one taken and the other left. Two shall be in the mill, one shall be taken and the other left. Two brothers working side by side, one shall be taken and the other left. A husband and a wife sitting at the same table, a mother and a daughter, or a mother and a son, one shall be taken and the other left."

in literature. By the early years of the eighteenth century the growing influence of women showed an unquestioned social supremecy; along another line the growth of more or less scientific social speculation had led to the development of what were subsequently called "women's rights."

"The finer ideals of the century were, however, becoming coarsened sometime before the Revolution and the center for the movements for raising the position of women was moved to England. The transition was marked by the publication in 1792 of Mary Wollstonecraft's "Vindication of the Rights of Women". From that time on England and later America had taken the foremost place in all movements for rendering the place of women as nearly as possible one of social equality with that of man. But such a movement is inevitable with the development of civilization. The ancient and matured civilization of the Egyptians was very favorable to women and the shorter but more rapid development of Rome constantly was to improve their position. In the same way the legal enactments the same way the legal enactments and decisions which have in England improved the position of women began centuries before the existence of any propaganda for women's rights. The main tendency of civilization is in the direction of an ever greater freedom and scope for women.

"More recent historical developments with which we are readily familiar disclose the revolutionary growth of women's rights, manifesting themselves in concessions in industry, literature and in political equality.

"The wise men of the East and of the West, the North and the South have brought the frankensence and myrrh of political fealty and laid them at the feet of the woman. In a large degree her place in government is secure. The granting of the franchise has well justified the philosophy of the political economist who claimed much for good government in advance of ripening public opinion and be it said to the credit of America that the nation has come at least to extend the benefits of its democracy to womankind.

"But more immediately are we concerned tonight in this discussion, of another phase of woman's rights, extending to industry which antedates by far the gift of political equality. Women in industry have brought about revolutionary changes in working conditions and have influenced well the course of social and civic development.

"It is incense to the pride of our citizenship that in the formative period of what is to be our commercial and industrial destiny we find such an organization as the Business and Professional Women taking its place along with our civic endeavors to make the city a better place in which to live and to promote better conditions for service among the women who now hold places of honor and trust in our business as well as governmental life.

"I congratulate you on your worthy effort and feel that the abundant faith of your co-workers in your ability to sustain this civic effort and to direct it with intelligence for the benefit of Cameron, will be doubly justified.

"Upon invitation of your committee I acknowledge with grateful appreciation this opportunity to address you and to advise with you on the subject assigned: "Some resolutions for the New Year."

"To all of us January first is auspicious because it is the beginning. We celebrate it in many ways, commonly a time for resolutions—a determination to write into the New Year's record some premise for achivement or make of it a basis for reaching greater heights. It is essentially a thrilling experience as we stand on the threshold of the New Year and with limited vision fathom as we may the mysteries held in the scroll which only time may unfold.

"January is the first month of the year. The old Roman year began with March. The beginning of the year was shifted to January about 251 B. C. but this arrangement was not accepted by the Christian nations until the eighteenth century. The Jewish New Year still falls on Sept. 9. The month was named in honor of Janus, the god of doors, gates and all passageways. He was represented in art as a god with two faces, one looking backward and the other forward. New Year's Day was the chief festival in his honor.

"Janus, in Roman mythology, was an important deity, second only to Jupiter himself. He was regarded as arthor of the arts of civilization and was believed to sit at the confines of the earth and at the gates of heaven and to be the special guardian of the beginning and the ending of every undertaking. He was thus the god of the rising and the setting sun. To him was ascribed the system of the years and the change of seasons. In art he is represented as holding in his right hand a scepter and in his left hand a key.

"And so it is with us tonight. We stand as it were, like pilgrims for a journey before the temple of Janus, invoking for good or evil accordingly as we purpose. In our hands we hold a key and scepter. Eagerly we thrust in the key, rushing out upon the unchartered main like the ancient Buccaneers for sheer love of the mast. To us the New Year is a quest. it is unknown. It is an ocean whose debts we must sound; a tide whose crest we must ride. It is a garden whose flowers have not been plucked; an orchard whose fruits have not been tasted and a field whose grain has not been harvested. But it lures us. We will sound the depths, steer the craft and pluck the rose with its thorns. We will taste the fruits and thrust in the sickle and what shall the harvest be?

"There is no main without its vessel; no romance without its quest nor Utopia without its pilgrim; and no sowing without reaping.

"And as we purpose before the Temple of Janus so will our course be.

"In our hands are the key and scepter, both emblems of destiny to be employed as inevitable to influence our lives in the year on whose threshold we now stand.

"There is an old saying that New Year resolutions are made to be broken and the Satirist tells us that on the second or third day out we erect a small monument and on that monument are these words: "Sacred to the memory of a New Year Resolution."

"I am sure that this is true in many instances because perchance we have ilous in our purposeETAOIakeernent resolved the impossible or have been frivilous in our purposes.

"As an organization the Business and Professional Women of Cameron may safely purpose much because they have come to be a vital force in the life of the community and the axiom that "united we stand and divided we fall," will I am sure resolve itself in favor of the positive and when we come to count the achievements of the year we will find that resolutions inspired by organized effort will survive and bear fruit for the good of Cameron.

"It is the collective and not the individual resolution that I would urge tonight. Not withstanding the high purposes that may actuate the life of the individual through the year as the result of some well conceived New Year resolution, your opportunity for service is abundant as an organization and collectively you should resolve and carry on.

"I will present some suggestions. I cannot here embrace in these suggestiones all that may be accomplished by this organization nor define your achievements, because I know that you purpose much for the year and will accomplish accordingly. If I should write for a collective program in the form of resolutions for the New Year I would urge the following:

"1. Secure a permanent meeting place with suitable club room, reading room and library.

"In support of this resolution I would urge the fact that no organization may function properly or gather about it momentum for progress unless its identity is secure in a fixed place of meeting with surroundings that are inviting to its members. The necessity for meetings such as this removes all doubt as to the need for a suitable club room and the fact that members may find many hours of enjoyment in moments of relaxation from their work in good literature, conversation and exchange of ideas supports the resolution in its concluding provision.

"2. Become affiliated with like organizations with membership in state or national societies if they exist; or in a fitting manner become identified with the club movement in state and nation.

While your problems are essentially local there is much to be gained in perspective, inspiration and knowledge by investing in the ideas of others and linking your influence with that of similiar organizations.

"3. Extend the benefits of this organization to neighboring cities and towns by offering assistance to business and professional women in these localities in organizing clubs such as this.

"In the support of this resolution is the eternal value of service. What you have found to be of benefit to you in your business and professional life in Cameron you have consummated in this organization and you will serve a high purpose and write into the record of the New Year an achievement worthwhile if you pass along to others these benefits.

"4. Adopt a permanent program for the year and incorporate in it some real work, some play and entertainment.

"In support of this resolution we form the basis by argument for much that should succeed in your relationship to the community in civic and social service. This organization is essentially a civic organization and must be so classified in the column of clubs. While your object in organization was to bring about a closer relationship between the business and professional women of Cameron and work collectively for their benefit, your duty in assuming responsibiiitiy along with other organizations became manifest. And by this statement of duty we should take into account not only the need for civic work but your justification in the eyes of the community will be measured largely by what you do for the community. Therefore you should make your program include some definite things to be done for Cameron. These things may not all be comprehended as we start the New Year but they will be manifest as time unfolds.

"Into this program should be incorporated an annual entertainment and through the year such as we are enjoying tonight. Such entertainments as these will heighten interest in the club and foreordain a fine quality of relaxation from work and in this way we will have much of play.

"The club will find in the course of its life that many things will challenge its attention and it will find much time to do worthwhile things for Cameron. As subdivisions to resolution No. 4 I will mention a few things that may be championed by this club which in my judgement would earn for it the abiding esteem of the community. Some of these are:

" Civic improvement, manifesting an interest in beautifying the parks and public school grounds, by making suitable representation to the government and assisting in any way that may be indicated by the City in response to your offer of help. If need be appoint committees for this purpose and link your organization with the strength of others to encourage a well laid plan of civic improvement. This need is very urgent in Cameron. Few trees shadow our park grounds and school campus; there is a total lack of landscaping and no works of art or sclupture may be found anywhere in Cameron to commemorate the traditions of our state or the work of those pioneers who wrought in hardship that we might enjoy the blessings of civilization.

"To me there seems also a need for interest in work that will promote the public welfare and this interest manifests itself in health conditions, works of charity and the like. I can think of nothing more appropriate at Holiday season than a community Christmas tree erected at some conveinient place on our streets or public square from which presents could be distributed to the poor and the real spirit of Christmas promoted. If I should writ a program for the Business and Professional Women I would include a committee to work in conjunction with other organizations to promote a community or municipal Christmas tree.

"Again while writing this program I would include a resolution for the work of the "good fellows" promoting cheer among the unfortunate, the poor and the needy, assisting with proper committees the work of other organizations along this line.

"5. Manifest an interest in the welfare of each member to the end that all business and professional women of Cameron are given the best working conditions; salaries that sustain and a profit for the rainy day; vacations and proper working hours.

"6. Encourage the friendship and assist whenever possible the women who reside in the country who come to Cameron to shop; providing all possible facilities for their entertainment and comfort while in the city.

"7. Assist worthy applicants to secure positions and extend the influence of this organization to improve their conditions.

"8. Establish a fund to be used for and participated in by members only as benefits in time of illness or actual need.

"9. Give the best of our talent to our employers and serve our work rather than expect our work to serve us.

"10. Live up to the scripture "Peace on earth, good will toward men," every day in the year and not make of it a holiday event.

"11. Be tolerant.

"12. Live up to the Golden Rule.

"13. Be loyal to our town and its merchants.

"14. Love much and hate little.

"Such my friends, are the resolutions that I suggest as applicable in part to the individual but more adapted to the collective strength of this organization which I bid God speed and salute as the most important local civic movement in recent years.

At the conclusion of the program a number of the members repaired to the K. C. Hall where splendid dance music was given by Mrs. Joe Casey. Mr. White honored the members with his presence at the dance for a short time, and the only honorary member of the club, Mr. Hubert Hefley, came to the dance hall late. The club will impose a heavy fine on this member for tardiness.

The club members wish to thank the ladies of circle No. 4 for the splendid repast, Mrs. Casey for the enjoyable program, Mr. White for his able address, Miss Baggett for her beautiful reading and the K. C. people for the use of their hall, and to thank this month's program committee: Miss Susan Pope, Mrs. H. C. Keith, Mrs. Bush Stafford, Miss Grace Stallworth, Miss Wilyne Hyde, Miss Cil Stedman and Miss Mary Randolph for their efficiency in getting up this delightful program.

The president of the club, Miss Annie Stallworth, requested a called meeting of the club for next Tuesday evening, January 12th at the K. C. Hall at 7:30 o'clock at which time much business of importance will come before the club. Let each member be present and on time.

INDIGESTION

Black-Draught Brings Relief for Tight, Bloated Feeling.

"I had indigestion," says Mr. W. B. Bouknight, of Ballentine, S. C. "Working out, I got in the habit of eating fast, for which I soon paid by having a tight, bloated feeling after meals. This made me very uncomfortable.

"I would feel stupid and drowsy, didn't feel like working. I was told it was indigestion. Some one recommended Black-Draught and I took it after meals. I soon could eat anything any time.

"I use it for colds and biliousness and it will knock out a cold and carry away the bile better and quicker than any liver medicine I have ever found."

Eating too fast, too much, or faulty chewing of your food, often causes discomfort after meals. A pinch of Black-Draught, washed down with a swallow of water, will help to bring prompt relief.

Black-Draught gently helps the over-taxed organs to perform their regular functions, in such cases, ridding the system of poisons that might accumulate.

BADLY RUN-DOWN

Lady Was Very Depressed on Account of Poor Health.

Mrs. H. S. Miller, of Spindale, N. C., says: "Five years ago I was very much run-down in health. I would give out with the least exertion. At times I would have to go to bed.

"I read of Cardui. . . My husband got me a bottle and encouraged me to take it. I was almost a skeleton, I was so thin. I was run-down and my general health was very poor. This was very depressing and I was in low spirits. My husband had to help me around. He did all he could for me and had me keep up Cardui.

"I continued taking the medicine for several months and it was wonderful the improvement I made. I gained over twenty pounds in weight, and I felt so much better besides. This gain was permanent, too. I have never lost it and my general health has been much better since I took Cardui."

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

If you will take oxalic acid solution and apply to your cane seated chairs which have become discolored, and then wash with hot water and soap and dry in a current of air, you will find their looks are improved.

A Dainty Nut Salad

Remove seeds and skins from white grapes and cut in halves lengthwise. Shredded fresh pinepple is added, and then apples cut in small pieces. Also a small amount of celery may be cut up. To this, add one quarter of the amount in Brazil nuts which have been cut in small pieces. Mix and season with lemon juice. Mayonnaise dressing is used to moisten.

Honeyscotch Candy

1 cup full of butter, two of sugar and two of honey are mixed and a heaping teaspoonful of cinnamon added. The mixture is boiled for ten minutes and then poured into a buttered pan, and cut in squares when cold.

STYLE NOTE

Costumes made of black suiting are now in fashion. Silk braid on sleeves and pockets and also on creases of the coat are good. These creases accentuate the smartness.

THE MOVIES

Rudolph Valentino and his wife, Natacha Rambova, seem to have definitely split. She has signed to act for F. B. O., and her first film will be a society drama.

Glenn Hunter, who won fame in "Merton of the Movies", has quit pictures for a time and is on the stage in New York.

Lon Chaney was born in 1883 and went into the pictures about thirteen years ago. Before that time he was on the stage. Mr. Channey is married.

HUMOR

Call Out the League

It was at the resturant, and the negro waiter had just dropped the platter containing the turkey.

"Well", said a bystander, "Well the world has just seen four great catastrophes."

"Four catastrophes?", replied his companion, "what are they?"

"The downfall of Turkey, the breaking up of China, the overthrow of Greece, and the humilation of Africa," was the reply.

"Waiter, I called for cured ham. Are you sure this you brought is cured?"

"Certain, sir."

"Well, it must have been a relapse!"

The story that is probably the most pathetic of all is the one about the young man who took Listerine to cure his halitosis and found that he was unpopular anyway.

How Newspapers Do It.

The cub reporter had been sent to cover the great mining disaster. His first message to the city editor was as follows:

"Scores are killed and others dying. But courage is still high. God is everywhere."

And this is the answer received by him.

"Let mine disaster go. Interview God. Get pictures."

The handsome dining table laid with Italian cut work and filet was centered with a beautiful Christmas electrically lighted bowl of carnations flanked with silver candelbra in which gleamed tapers of the favored shades caught by streamers of tulle which fell across the lace cover of the board. Seven tables of players grouped themselves at the small tables which were spread with white covers centered with Christmas confections and stuffed dates. Four dainty little maids: Misses Dorothy Denson, Harriet Flinn and Katharyn Henderson of Bryan, and Ernestine Green of Rosebud, T. J. Denson and Leland Green assisted Mrs. A. N. The Fish reported a good time during the holidays. Many parties were given, including those by Doris Fairleigh, Lola Clinton, Herbert Freeman and Maggie Reed McCown. Some of the freshman girls spent a portion of their holidays in Rosebud and had a hot time with the Rosebud sheiks.

The Juniors

There's a class in high school that's far above the rest
The Seniors may be higher, but the Juniors are the best.

The Soph'mores, like the Seniors, are not in the race at all,
But the fish keep up with them even if they are not so tall.

The Seniors, Fish and Soph'mores have sponsore very fine
But Pitts and Dickard suit the Juniors in any sort of clime.

In the Book Contest he veed the four classes
To see the Juniors so far ahead, the Seniors had to put on glasses

In selling Christmas seals the Seniors Fish and Sophs were beat
Because the Juniors stepped right up and took the very first seat.

So you see in everything the classes undertake
The Junior class always gets the very largest stake.

—o—

O! Save the Seniors

When will you save the Seniors?
Oh, Perkins, of little mercy, when?
Not Sophs or Fish but Seniors.

Flowers of your heart, Oh Perk, are they Let them not pass like weeds away
But, Perkins, save the Seniors.

—o—

Juniors Over the Top

The motto of the Juniors seems to be "Over the Top or Nothing," because everything they attempt they put it over like a flash. The last thing of importance was the selling of Christmas seals. They went a hundred per cent from the very beginning while the Seniors brought up a very distant second.

—o—

How Absurd

That Roy Jeter drive 45 miles an hour.

That Mabel Lene Graves make an average of 99 in English.

That Iva Wilson be tardy.

That Doris Davis conjugate the verb renir correctly.

That the Seniors win the Loving Cup.

That Gardine get kicked out of school.

That Hooks does not spell well.

That Nell Sue has straight hair.

That Newton Tibbs chew gum in Spanish class.

That Reed Rogers wear bell bottom trousers.

That Ox Newton wear Oxford bags to chemistry class.

That Mr. Keeling has a brand new Lizzie.

—o—

Miss Edmondson: "William Morrison, go to the board and write a paragraph on income tax."

William (after thoroughly searching his brain, this idea popped into his head and he wrote it on the board): "Once there was a little boy who had a dog named Tax. He opened the door and income Tax."

—o—

Deck the hall with boughs of holiy
For we Juniors say, "Tis season to be jolly.
For fast away the old year passes
And this time next year we'll be Senior lads and lassies."

Complex and Varied Is the Human Soul!

I never cease to admire the indelibility of human nature. It does not wear off. Whatever they may do, men are and remain what they are. They may deceive themselves; they may deceive others, especially the short-sighted ones, those who cannot look from the proper distance. Thus the surface of the sea seems quite dark when you are very near to it, but if you climb into the crow's nest you will see how clear the water is, and the higher you go the deeper you see. George Sarton writes, as quoted from "Transparency," in Scribner's Magazine.

If you have learned to contemplate life in its true perspective, how transparent, how beautiful it becomes. This transparency is, indeed, the very spice of life. Among the many splendors of nature, what could be more impressive, more delightful than the infinite variety of the men and women who pass, mix and play before our eyes? Birds are pretty enough, and there seems to be no end to the beauty and fantasy of their plumage, but what of women! what of men! Can there be anything under the sun more complex, more varied, more full of problems and enigmas of all kinds than the soul of man? The mystery seems bottomless, for even if we were to understand each soul in itself, we would still but be at its threshold. For we would not yet know how each of these souls would react upon the others. Each possible combination, each pair of souls opens a new vista of endless secrecy.

Halted Guns to Save Heroic Mother Bird

One day during the World war I was taking a battery of artillery along a grassy road, a writer in London Tit-Bits relates. The horses were trotting, and behind them the guns rumbled and swayed over ruts and stones.

Suddenly there appeared not fifty yards in front of the leading horses a dozen fluffy brown partridge "cheepers," tiny mites no bigger than sparrows, running hither and thither in the wildest panic before the approaching danger. With them was the mother bird. She chivvied them off into the grass on either side of the road, and then, when the last one had made its escape, turned and with open beak and half-spread wings faced the battery, daring them to come on.

Had the battery not been halted the bird would have given her life in an endeavor to ensure the safety of her chicks. As it was, she achieved her object by a display of real heroism in the face of hopeless odds.

This is a typical example of the way nature makes heroines of animal mothers, no matter how timid they may be when they have no family to care for. In defence of their helpless young, nature's heroines will face any creature that threatens their safety.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

We salute the New Year and at the same time bid farewell to the Old Year with its record written accordingly as we have lived and wrought.

There have been mistakes. We have not run the course as becomes the best in us but as we leave the Old Year we look back upon it with pleasure for during the period it has been our good pleasure to have lived among this people and to have done what we could to promote the common welfare.

What the future holds none may know. Father time with the scroll will unfold the months as we follow in the wake of time. We are conscious of a deep desire to be helpful and with forgiveness and forgetting; holding fast to the right we look with confidence to the future.

BAPTIST CHURCH NEWS

Sunday was a great day at the Baptist church. The new year is starting off in the right way. Bro. Hutcherson preached two soul-touching messages to the good of all who heard them. It seemed like big-meeting time for there were five additions to the church at the two services. Three of these were fine young men who came on profession of faith to follow their Lord in Baptism. May many more such days be ours.

I come now to say farewell to the people of Cameron. I have been here but a short while but I have learned to love you all. My wife and I appreciate all your kindnesses and will always have a place for you in our hearts. I have never been treated more royally by any church or people.

It has been a distinct joy to work with your noble pastor, Bro. Hutcherson. He is indeed a God led and Spirit filled man, a preacher of the Word, and a real pastor. You Baptist stand behind him with your prayers and follow as he leads you and we will hear even better things of you in the future than we have thus far.

I go to Rogers as pastor. I feel that the Lord is leading in this. He has called me to preach and I must preach. When you pray, think of me. I will need your prayers so much. May the Lord richly bless you is my prayer.
